During July European credit markets experienced a positive performance (H9PC Index +0.41%), in tandem with the movement of the Eurostoxx 50 (+0.62%) and S&P 500 (+2.27%). PCE core deflator was up 4% YoY in US, while consumer price rose 5.4% YoY (fastest pace since 2008), challenging the view that high inflation will be temporary. FOMC statement indicated that economy is moving toward the goals that FED set out to begin tapering, but the tone used by Jerome Powell during the press conference was less hawkish: he told that the labor market is still "some way away" from justifying tapering, postponing any decision to September/November meeting. European Central Bank did not change its monetary policy; changes were only made on the forward guidance but nothing on the QE or the PEPP: ECB will continue buy bonds and maintain its deeply negative rates in an effort to bring Eurozone out of its persistent pattern of sluggish inflation. In addition ECB terminated its strategy review (the first for 18 years) setting a new 2% inflation targets where "negative and positive deviation of inflations from target are equally undesirable", a shift that gives policymakers flexibility to keep rates at historic lows for longer. In this context, the 10 years bund yield was significantly lower at -0.46% (-25bps in the month), in tandem with the 10 years Treasury at 1.22% (-25bps in the month). Gold rose to 1814 $ per ounce, while oil was stable at 76 USD per barrel supported by OPEC+ deal that limited increase in production. We think that this is still an interesting entry point for our strategy: current YTM gives us confidence on the capability to generate positive performance in line with targets during 2021; average maturity of the bonds in our portfolios is still around 1 year and should help reduce volatility in case of new episodes of market stress.
